HOW TO FIT A HELMET

FULMER

√ Properly fitting a helmet begins with accurate measurements. Have a friend wrap a seamstress or tailor's tape around the fullest part of your head, located just above the eyebrows and ears, around the head to the starting point. Always double-check the measurement. Based on the measurement, check out the fitment charts (right) to find your perfect fit.

√ Put on the helmet, and fasten chin straps. The helmet should fit comfortably and squarely on your head.

√ Once the helmet is on your head and straps are securely fastened, move it from side-to-side and up and down with your hands. Your head should feel the pressure of the movements, but the helmet should not move or shift. Note: A new helmet should be as tight as you can comfortably wear it; the helmet will loosen up a bit as the comfort liner compresses through use.

√ Finally, run your pinky finger between your head and the helmet liner near the forehead. If there are gaps or open spaces, the helmet is too big. A smaller helmet may be needed.

TECH

On impact, the force towards the head causes the cones to compress. This motion creates lateral forces, which spread sideways through the higher density foam, and are absorbed by the outer layer. While the head is traveling in the opposite direction, CONEHEAD compresses the lower density cones, which slows the compression to the head. The end result is drastically reduced impact G forces – SAFETY REDEFINED!

Wick away liner

Fulmer inner helmet liners feature a series of materials and detailed design focusing on supporting air flow through the helmet air intake and exhaust ports. The end result is a comfortable helmet you can wear all day.

Aerodynamic helmets exhibit almost no lift at high speeds, do not yank neck muscles when turning the head in a wind blast, and offer a quiet ride.

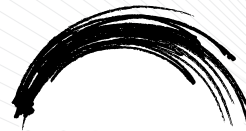

iShade™ retractable internal sun shield is an optically correct, quick release and clear external shield that helps you adjust to light conditions.

Fulmer helmets feature high air flo ventilation which provides all day, breathability and riding comfort.

Air Channel (AC) cooling utilizes cool air input and exhaust output vents for maximized comfort.

Low profile helmets make your ride enjoyable by providing perfect protection for your head, while your facial area is uncovered.

Snell certified is assurance that this helmet has been measured up to the highest standards of protective performance. Snell certification and testing is the most demanding in the industry. The Snell Memorial Foundation is an organization that sets voluntary standards for motorcycle helmets, bicycle helmets and auto racing helmets, as well as other kinds of protective headgear. Snell Standards are the world's toughest. Snell helmets demand more protective capability than anybody else on the planet. This logo means this Fulmer helmet is SNELL tested and certified.

One of the biggest concerns of advanced riders is reducing helmet weight, without sacrificing safety. This Fulmer helmet features a specially designed production process that allows the helmet to reduce weight, but maintain safety requirements.

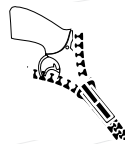

Fulmer is a 100-percent certified, licensed Mossy Oak product provider. Mossy Oak camouflage features true to life features that blend in with Mother Nature. It's not a passion. It's an obsession - and Fulmer is a proud licensee partner.

Kryptek is a technical camouflage with military tactical apparel attributes embedded in its design, which are based on years of combat in ultra-extreme conditions and environments. Fulmer is a proud licensee partner.

FWP-certified apparel provides strong, reliable weather properties, protecting against wind and weather conditions.

Fulmer concealed-carry apparel designs provide a concealable way to carry your firearms. Our apparel features a quick entry access pocket, with inner pocket structure points to keep your weapon in place. Fulmer concealed-carry designs provide firearm protection and complete concealment.

Light up the night - and times of low visibility - with Fulmer's LTN reflective material. Bright light is reflected back to the light source increasing both visibility and safety.

Our Fulmer PU body armor is certified under CE technical standards, and is designed to reduce impact shock during a fall. Fulmer pads are placed in key areas of our technical apparel to not interfere with rider movement and mobility.
